

Finding Your Way Beyond Depression & Anxiety

Emotions Unveiled

With depression being one of the most commonly diagnosed ailments today, we thought it was important to help raise awareness on possible underlying causes that are responsible for depression as a symptom.

Many people don't know that while depression can be a serious illness all in itself, all too often it is experienced as a symptom of systemic imbalance.

As the systems of the body are interrelated, proper functioning and optimal health occurs when they are in balance and harmony. It is important to consider all disturbances in these delicate systems and opt for a holistic approach to caring for your body.

Some common examples of ailments that cause depression as a symptom include vitamin deficiency and decreased t-hormone levels due to imbalances in the endocrine system. Even these ailments are mostly caused by disturbances that may occur due to lack of exercise and improper nutrition.

An excellent way to benefit from exercise and enhance your mood at the same time is through dance or movement therapy.

Studies have shown that benefits from this form of therapy include the improvement of symptoms of depression and anxiety. It is also a magnificent way to connect with your body and release repressed emotions that may be causing harm to the delicate systems in the body.

A lot of people struggling with depression find it difficult to "get going", so starting a dance routine or any other physical activity may not be easy.

Was Your Depression Misdiagnosed?

Depression as a symptom of underlying disease

More Americans are being diagnosed with depression and prescribed antidepressant medication now than ever before. The top two prescription antidepressant medications reached nearly 4.5 billion in sales in 2006 and have only grown. Both are used to treat anxiety and major depressive disorder.

So where does this modern epidemic stem from? Some experts believe that it may be a misdiagnosis. Generally speaking, depression is considered an ailment in itself, but if we consider mental and physical health in a holistic manner we might discover that depression is many times a symptom of disease rather than an isolated condition.

Finding the cause of depression can require some serious detective work since it is a symptom of a number of ailments as we will see below:

Depression linked to vitamin deficiency: According to numerous studies, mood disorders such as depression are one of the symptoms of vitamin B deficiency. Foods such as spinach and broccoli are high in B vitamins and can help reverse these symptoms.

Depression, anxiety and thyroid function: The pituitary gland is responsible for releasing numerous hormones essential for health. One of the most the essential functions it performs is increasing the basal metabolic rate. It also regulates protein, fat, and carbohydrate metabolism, as well as vitamin metabolism.

Hypothyroid is a condition where not enough t-hormones are produced. Depression is one of the most common symptoms of hypothyroidism. Thyroid Assist™ naturally supports healthy thyroid functioning.

When hyperthyroidism is present, the pituitary gland produces excessive amounts of t-hormones. Symptoms of hyperthyroidism include heart palpitations and anxiety. Thyroid disorders are relatively easy to diagnose with simple tests that measure the amounts of T-hormones present in the blood stream. ThyroSoothe™ is a natural remedy to support systemic health of the endocrine system.

AllergiClear™ is an all natural herbal remedy that promotes optimal immune system health, and helps to maintain clear eyes, nose and chest and supports the body's ability to naturally resist allergens during the allergy season.

Depression and melatonin: Medical Research has confirmed the relationship between high levels of daytime melatonin and depression. Melatonin disorders are more prevalent in winter time where shorter days cause excessive melatonin to be released in the body.

Depression and adrenal hormones: Adrenal fatigue is triggered when the amount of stress exhausts the capacity of the body to atone and recover from stress. AdrenoBoost™ is an all natural remedy that supports the health of the adrenal glands as well as the body's natural ability to adapt to routine everyday stressors.

Depression and digestive function: A diet that features over processed foods high in starch and sugar can contribute to a sluggish metabolism which may also be responsible for mood disorders such as depression. This makes sense considering that digestive disorders may cause toxins not to be expelled and to actually be reabsorbed from the colon back into the bloodstream. DigestAssist™ promotes healthy digestion and comfort after meals.

Depression and toxins: Overexposure to heavy metal toxins such as lead and mercury which can be commonly found in certain types of fish have been clinically shown to cause psychiatric disorders such as anxiety and depression. Detox Drops™ assists in the body's natural elimination of toxins.

Depression and Glucose and Insulin Tolerance: Whenever we eat, insulin is released into the blood stream by the pancreas. Insulin is an essential hormone that enables us to properly metabolize the glucose produced each time we eat a meal. Insulin also has the essential role of lowering blood sugar. Insulin resistance or tolerance refers to a set of factors that increase the likelihood of developing type 2 diabetes. Depression is a commonly experienced symptom of this condition. Insulate Plus™ is a 100% herbal remedy to help maintain blood sugar levels that are within the normal range and support the endocrine system. Depression and Diet: High quantities of protein are said to suppress CNS Serotonin levels in the brain. Additionally, the morphine-like substances derived from the incomplete digestion of dairy and cereal grain proteins are other dietary factors which may alter mood by depressing CNS serotonin, dopamine and norepinephrine levels (5) according to Ron Hoggan M.A. & James Braly M.D.

Depression and Stress: Stress that is not properly managed through relaxation techniques and exercise can cause systemic imbalances that may trigger a wide range of symptoms one of them being depression. Can You Dance Depression Away?

Finding harmony & healing through movement

It's as simple as this: The more you move your body, the lesser the chance of depression or anxiety setting in.

Dance is considered the most fundamental of arts, as it involves a direct expression of oneself through the movements of the body. Because it is such a basic form of genuine communication, it is considered an especially efficient form of therapy.

Based in the conviction that the body, the mind and the spirit are intricately interconnected, the American Dance Therapy Association defines dance/movement therapy as "the psychotherapeutic use of movement as a process that furthers the emotional, cognitive, social and physical integration of the individual."

Dance or Movement Therapy has been used for centuries as a way of improving mental and physical well-being. Today dance therapy also stresses the importance of the connection between body and mind as a way of helping people achieve balance and harmony in all aspects of their lives.

Psychoanalysts have long believed that anger towards others if repressed is turned against ourselves. This anger converted into self-hatred is believed to be one of the most common causes of depression.

Dancing is therefore known to provide ideal conditions for the release of repressed feelings. This release facilitates a person's ability to overcome a number of illnesses including depression. Research has also shown that dancing has the potential of minimizing the devastating effects depression has on the body.

Dancing has proved to be exceptionally beneficial to seniors since it exercises memory function and coordination, and is an overall tonic for the body and mind.

Dancing is also a great way to bond with your partner or spouse and to meet people if you are single. Finally, the socializing aspect of dancing is something everyone can benefit from. So get your shoes on and dance the sadness away!

The Importance of Emotional & Psychological Health

Often, we do not focus on psychological health as vigilantly as we do an individual's physical health, regardless of gender or age. But like our physical wellbeing, we must also be attentive to our psychological, or mental, state to consider ourselves fully fit.

Many illness and conditions fall into this broad mental health spectrum such as learning disorders, concentration, tension, anxiety – test taking is a prime example – depression, mood swings, depression, and even sleeplessness.

At Native Remedies you will find a comprehensive set of herbal remedies to help you manage and optimize your psychological health – naturally and safely.

Two Important Differences in Native Remedies Products

We use the Full Spectrum Method of extraction to create our products. Many so-called natural remedies are manufactured using standardized extractions which – although often cited as being more scientific method – is not approved by the manufacturers of holistic medicines.

To us, it makes little sense for companies to go the natural route, while being unable to guarantee that their product is free of contamination with chemicals known to be harmful to health! Using the Full Spectrum Method helps us to maintain the integrity, balance and therapeutic effect of herbs with the least risk of side effects or harm to your health!

We utilize a unique dual-modality approach to complete holistic wellness because we know that natural medicine works best in combination (herbal, homeopathic, flower essences and tissue salts) for fast relief and long-term care. Our approach provides a complete solution by offering OTC homeopathic remedies for relief of symptoms as well as compound herbal remedies for complete support of your physical, emotional and mental well-being.

While each of our natural remedies works well on its own to address a specific body function or relieve a particular symptom, we believe that by combining our herbal and homeopathic remedies you will find a complete solution that is safe and highly effective.
