Is Sterilizing the Solution?

“Bully breeds” now under the radar

There are many counties across the United States that have issued mandated spaying and neutering, instituted differential licensing, or placed restrictions on breeding.

While the intention of these laws is aimed at curbing stray animals, decreasing the number of animals that enter shelters, and hopefully lowering overall euthanasia rates—a new ordinance in Lancaster, California specifically targeting all Pit Bulls, Rottweilers, and mixes of the breeds to be sterilized will soon go into effect.

As these breeds have already been under strict scrutiny for multiple reported attacks and their instinctually aggressive behavior, those in favor of the ordinance specifically want to see a decrease in gang activity related to dog fighting, injuries, and deaths.

In addition to the mandatory spay or neutering, owners will also be required to secure their property, ensure proper muzzling and leash restraints of the dog, and complete approved dog obedience training, according to the statement.

While your dog may or may not be affected by the new mandates, being a responsible dog owner affects everyone. Even the most well-mannered dog may occasionally act out, and it is important to take notice of any unusual behaviors, as these may be signs of an underlying health condition.

Herbal and homeopathic remedies have proven to be highly effective to soothe and calm your pet’s aggressive behavior to safely promote a more peaceful demeanor- naturally!

- Socialize your pet from an early age by exposing him to new people, other animals, places, situations and experiences

- Continue to train your dog regularly after he has been socialized with 15 minute sessions of obedience training 2-3 times daily

- Feed your pet a high-quality, all natural diet that contains vitamins, minerals and nutrients and supplement with natural remedies to promote calm

- Look out for warning signs of aggressive behavior in your dog to try and avoid a dangerous situation

- Exercise your pet regularly to release pent-up energy and stress

- If your dog shows aggression towards another dog, remember to remain calm and do not panic – your dog will sense your panic and as a result will only become more aggressive

- Take precautions if you know your dog is aggressive – use a muzzle when necessary, limit his contact with people or confine him to a cage or gated area

- Do not play wrestling games or tug-of-war with your dog, as it encourages aggressive behavior

"I have two young male dogs, both adolescents that do not get along with each other, never mind any other male dog! This has made it hard to go for walks without chaos and I had just about given up before trying your Aggression Formula, with very good results. The best is that they are still happy and bouncy"

Question:

"I have an 8-year old male Westie who eats a mostly raw diet of meat and veggies with occasional fruits. We live in Texas, where summers are hot and humid, with mosquitoes.

I've been giving him an over-the-counter preventative, but wonder if there is danger in the build up of toxins from that. Is there an alternative, and if so, how effective is it?

We also have lots of fleas in grasses, etc., so I'd be interested in flea prevention, too. Thanks."

-Lisa

Answer:

We can highly recommend our Parasite Dr.™, which is a 100% herbal remedy specially formulated to promote digestive health and balance, cleanse the blood and support the immune system.

In low to medium risk areas, we recommend that dosage be repeated every few months. However, in high risk areas, a once daily maintenance dose should be used.

We would recommend that you have your vet test for heartworm (which should be done regularly in any case, even when treated) and if the dog receives a clean bill of health, then you could go directly on to the maintenance dosage, continuing indefinitely.

DetoxPlus™ is also recommended, especially if your dog has been on synthetic meds, which can undermine the liver. A 3 week course is recommended per bottle dosage instructions. You can combine the DetoxPlus and Parasite Dr. and administer at the same time.
