Pet Alzheimer's

What is Alzheimer's?

As our pets get older they become vulnerable to a number of the same diseases as humans, including arthritis, heart disease, cancer, diabetes and Alzheimer's disease. Kitty or doggy Alzheimer's, also known as Cognitive Dysfunction Syndrome (CDS) is a degenerative neurological disorder that causes a number of cognitive symptoms such as disorientation, memory loss, confusion, and personality changes.

It's often difficult to distinguish between the normal signs of aging and the early signs of Alzheimer's. It may seem somewhat expected for your old pet to be slower, less interested in things and have moments of confusion, however, keep in mind that personality changes and severe memory loss are not a normal part of getting old.

A pet with Alzheimer's may display some of the following symptoms and behaviors:

- stops responding to his or her name
- seems to forget old tricks and no longer responds to learnt commands
- does not seem to recognize you or other familiar people or animals
- forgetting routines, which can include forgetting to eat or drink
- staring blankly into space or at walls
- gets disoriented and may wonder around aimlessly
- becomes prone to repetitive and compulsive behaviors
- disturbed sleep patterns which may mean your pet sleeps more during the day but remains awake at night
- lack of energy
- easily agitated
- howling or wailing aimlessly, especially on waking
- Frequent "accidents" in the house where your dog doesn't find the yard in time or your cat can't find the litter box. They may even forget the purpose of the litter box or going out.

What Causes Alzheimer's?

Alzheimer's is a condition more likely to occur with age, but remember that different breeds of cats and dogs tend to age faster than others. For example, an Irish Wolfhound may be old by the age of 6yrs, while a Maltese poodle is only elderly at 12. But just like Alzheimer's in humans, the underlying cause of pet Alzheimer's or CDS is not clearly understood.

It is not intended to diagnose or treat any medical condition. Nothing in this ebook is intended to be a substitute for professional medical advice, diagnosis, or treatment. Always seek the advice of your veterinarian or other qualified health provider with any questions you may have regarding a medical condition.

Never disregard professional medical advice or delay in seeking it because of something you have read in this ebook or on ANY website.

What has been found is that, like in the human condition, there is a build up of a nerve-damaging protein called beta amyloid in the brain. When this starch-like protein builds up it forms plaque which clogs the brain and inhibits the transmission of cognitive signals between the brain neurons.

Diagnosing Alzheimer's

Alzheimer's is not something that your vet will pick up on during a routine examination. It is therefore essential to alert you vet of any strange behaviors you have noticed in your elderly pet. Alzheimer's can often be diagnosed with the occurrence of one or more geriatric behaviors that cannot be accounted for by other medical conditions.

Your vet will need a detailed description of the symptoms and may run some tests to rule out any other conditions that may be causing the symptoms. Depending on the symptoms, your vet may suggest blood tests, urinalysis, a neurological exam, cerebrospinal fluid analysis, or CAT scan.

Help for Alzheimer's

While Alzheimer's cannot be cured, treatment can slow down the progression of the disease and improve your pet's quality of life. A change in diet is often a part of the treatment program, and your vet may recommend a food that's fortified with anti-oxidants.

Your vet may prescribe a drug called Selegiline hydrochloride (Anipryl) which works by increasing the dopamine levels in your pet's brain. The drug has been quite successful in reversing partial damage and improving the behaviors of many pet's with Alzheimer's, although sometimes improvement is only seen in 60 days! As with other pharmaceutical medications, side effects can be a concern and may include vomiting, diarrhea, itchy skin, and loss of appetite.

Natural Remedies

There are a number of natural ingredients that can help treat the age-related and cognitive symptoms associated with Alzheimer's. Studies have revealed that the herb Gotu Cola helps to increase oxygen supply to the brain and improve memory and mental alertness.

In addition, it has excellent calming qualities which will help to reduce the stress so often associated with disorientation. Rosemary is another herb which works in a similar manner and it is well known for its ability to strengthen the memory and increase energy levels.

It also helps to control free radicals in the body thereby protecting your pet against a number of illnesses such as cancer, heart disease as well as premature aging. Lastly, the natural sea-organism Spirulina is an excellent over-all vitality tonic and helps boost your pet's immune system and generally mental and physical health.

Tips for Alzheimer's

Michele Carelse, Clinical Psychologist

All of our natural remedies are formulated by our expert team of herbalists, naturopaths and homeopaths, and headed by Michele Carelse.

Michele has had years of experience in the manufacturing and use of natural remedies for both people and pets. In addition, she is a trained Clinical Psychologist and has been incorporating natural remedies into her treatment of patients with depression, anxiety, ADD, ADHD and stress for many years with spectacular results.

- Provide your pet with a stress-free and predictable environment. Keep things structured and in routine and where possible, avoid change in your pet's life.
- Assist your pet with daily grooming as your pet may forget to clean and groom itself. A gentle brush of the coat and making sure nails are kept trimmed will go a long way in helping your pet feel more comfortable.
- Encourage your pet to eat and drink regularly. They may need a little reminding and enticing from time to time. Pet water fountains can be useful as the bubbling sound of water can remind your pet to drink and eat.
- Provide your cat with extra litter trays around the house so that there is always one close at hand which can be easily found., Remember to take him or out regularly and more frequently if accidents are occurring. Your pet may forget to alert you when he needs to go out so you have to do the remembering.
- Consider a supplement of omega-3 fatty acids. They're great for over-all brain health and can really help increase your pet's cognitive functioning.
- Provide plenty of attention and mental stimulation in the form of walks, games and verbal praise. While your pet may not always recognize you, they will appreciate the attention and the mental stimulation will help keep their brains active.
- Alzheimer's pets can wander off if you're not careful. Take measures to ensure they cannot leave the house and consider putting a bell on their collar so you can be sure of their whereabouts indoors.
- It can be heartbreaking to see your old pet so confused and disoriented, but always remember the joys they brought you and that now you can return the favor with lots of TLC and a little extra pampering.

The Natural Approach

While Western medicine has become the norm in many cultures, it is not the only treatment option. Conventional western medicine, often called allopathic medicine, is the system of medicine taught at most medical schools and most pharmaceutical and synthetic medicines are manufactured and marketed according to the principles of allopathic medicine. Allopathic medicine is also sometimes called orthodox medicine.

Because most of us in the Western world have grown up in a society in which allopathic medicine is the prevailing norm, we forget that, only a few decades ago, homeopathic, herbal and other natural medicines were commonly available – and freely used even by conventional doctors and veterinarians. While there are often heated debates about which system of medicine is 'better' than the other, many responsible doctors and vets (whether they are allopathic or not) recognize that both have a role to play in the treatment program.

Just like humans, domesticated animals like dogs and cats are affected by the health hazards of modern living. Pollution, poor nutrition, stress and unhealthy lifestyles can lead to a variety of illnesses and conditions that are very similar to those experienced by humans. In fact, many, if not most pet health concerns can be addressed by helping your pets to live a healthier lifestyle. While it has its place, conventional medicine for animals and 'modern technology' have failed our pets in many ways.

According to pet expert and author CJ Puotinen, most holistic veterinarians and animal health care professions list annual vaccinations and commercial pet foods as the major contributory cause in the rising rates of chronic illness in pets today. Similarly, Juliette de Bairacli Levy, respected author and renowned animal breeder, points out that contrary to the belief that mass vaccination and antibiotic use will contribute to a decrease in disease, the opposite has in fact proved true. Like their human counterparts, today's pets are becoming more and more vulnerable to chronic disease and ill health. This has led many veterinarians to search for alternatives and to espouse more holistic methods of keeping our pets healthy.

"In the wild, animals instinctively seek out healing herbs to help them when they are ill or undernourished. In fact, Asclepius, the ancient Greek god of medicine, respected dogs very highly for their ability to seek out and eat medicinal herbs in the wild. This ability is shared by other animals, including cats. We are coming to realize that nature often has the answers - but animals have always known this! Natural medicine can help your pet just as it can help you. While there is always a place for conventional veterinary medicine, natural medicine can compliment conventional veterinary care and in many cases do just as well. I have applied the same care and research that have gone into our Native Remedies range for adults and children to the development of pet-friendly, safe and effective natural remedies for animals. As always, all remedies are formulated to the highest therapeutic standards and manufactured under strict pharmaceutical conditions for your peace of mind and the well being of your pets." Michele Carelse, Clinical Psychologist.

"When a veterinary surgeon practices the use of homeopathic medicine and is asked why he does so, he may give one of several answers. The simple answer would be that the results are good, an emphatic answer would be that homeopathic treatment has no unpleasant or dangerous side effects, while still achieving successful results.

The PetAlive Homeopathic range has been formulated with this knowledge and is specifically designed to treat your pet in a holistic and natural manner."

Common Questions Asked About Holistic Health Distance Learning Courses:

What is Certification?

Most schools will offer an exam that tests the student's knowledge of the material taught in the respective course. Upon successful completion of this exam, a Certificate or Diploma will be issued by the school attesting that the student has successfully met the requirements as specified by that school. The only governmental recognition of Aromatherapy in North America is the occupational title designation granted to the BCAA under the Societies Act of British Columbia.

What is a Certified Aromatherapist or Reflexologist?

Most prospective students want to know whether taking our courses will lead to their becoming 'Certified' in that healing modality, thereby leading to the title of Certified Aromatherapist, Certified Reflexologist or Certified Color/Crystal Therapist. The answer to this really depends on what you mean by 'Certified.' We believe it can be misleading to purport that completing a course in a healing modality such as reflexology, aromatherapy or color/crystal therapy will lead to a designation of 'Certified' Therapist. These are not official title designations nor are they ones which are recognized by any country's governmental body. All that these titles mean is that this is what an Individual Instructor, School or Institution decided to put on the Diploma it awards those who successfully complete their course.

What is an accredited course in Aromatherapy or Reflexology?

The answer to this will depend on who you are asking. At the present time, British Columbia is the only government to recognize Aromatherapy as a distinct profession and has granted Occupational Title Protection to the members of the BCAA (British Columbia Alliance of Aromatherapy) with the exclusive right for its members to call themselves Registered Aromatherapists (R.A.).

At this time, neither Reflexology nor Color/Crystal Therapy have such occupational designations in any country although one prominent Reflexology school in Colorado, The Modern Institute of Reflexology, has gained occupational designation for their institution in that state. MIR has been designated by the Colorado State Division of Private Occupational Schools - Dept. of Higher Education as an approved school. Our Reflexologist who developed the reflexology modules for our courses was trained at MIR as a Certified Reflexologist, a Master Reflexologist and a Dr. of Reflexology.

In the United States, the NAHA (National Association for Holistic Aromatherapy) has put into place their Approved Standards for Aromatherapy Training. The Alternative Healing Academy's Advanced Aromatherapy course meets and exceeds these standards and we are in the application process of becoming an approved program through the NAHA.

In Canada, there are a number of different Associations including the BCAPA (British Columbia Association of Practicing Aromatherapists) and the CFA (Canadian Federation of Aromatherapists). Time will tell if one authoritative body or association becomes the standard by which to judge and govern the educational offerings of these alternative healing modalities.

It has to be noted that NO form of aromatherapy "certification" is currently recognized in the USA by anyone other than those in the trade, nor is aromatherapy (or essential oils in the aromatherapy trade) regulated by any governmental body.

Some information about the courses we offer:

1) You can receive the course in one of two ways: A cd with the modules and tests in PDF format can be shipped to you; or, The modules can be emailed to you three at a time. Each time you complete the tests for the current three modules, a new set of three modules will be emailed to you.

2) All modules are clearly explained, are in pdf format and fully illustrated.

3) The Advanced Aromatherapy Practitioner and the Advanced Reflexology Practitioner courses are designed to meet the National Association for Holistic Aromatherapy (NAHA) guidelines.

4) A tutor will be available via email to answer any questions you may have.

You will be contacted after purchase to find out how you would like your course delivered. All tests for the course can be either emailed or snail-mailed to The Alternative Healing Academy.

Upon successful completion of any full diploma or certification course (with a score of 80% or higher), you will receive a beautiful Diploma, suitable for framing.
