Pet Bad Breath

What is Bad Breath?

Bad breath, otherwise known as halitosis is a very common condition that affects our pets at some point. Animals don't brush their teeth as we do – so it's not surprising that they may have rather stinky breath! For some animals, bad breath is a temporary and brief concern that may only arise at certain times of the day (such as on waking), or after eating pet foods. For other animals, bad breath is a more severe and persistent condition.

What Causes Bad Breath?

Some causes of bad breath in pets include:

- Poor oral hygiene or health, including tooth decay and/or gum disease.
- A dry mouth (often caused by lack of saliva in the mouth due to certain medications)
- An over growth of certain bacteria in the mouth and digestive system
- Sinus infections
- A high protein diet
- Poor digestion
- Constipation
- Poor liver health
- Diabetes
- Respiratory disease
- Tonsillitis
- Gastrointestinal problems
- Bacterial infections
- Viral infections

Help for Bad Breath

Natural Remedies

The task of brushing your dog's teeth or cat's teeth can be rather frustrating, difficult and tiresome. In addition, Furthermore, many medications for bad breath in cats and dogs can have other side effects. Luckily, nature has a solution.

There are a number of natural herbal and homeopathic ingredients such as Apium graveolens Foeniculum officinale and Gallium aparine (Cleavers) known herbs to stimulate natural cleansing and assist in the routine detoxification of the body – thus dramatically reducing the symptoms of bad breath in animals, while helping to combat the underlying causes, thus leaving your pet's breath naturally sweet and inoffensive.

Tips for preventing bad breath

- Encourage your pet to drink fresh water daily.
- A healthy diet is key – one that does not include too much protein. There are also natural pet foods that help reduce the risk of gum disease.
- Try not to give your pets sugary treats such as ice cream and sweetened milk – these sugary snacks will harm their teeth!
- It is normal for cats and dogs to have teeth cleanings once a year, so talk to your vet about the need for an oral check up.
- If you are up to the task of brushing your pet's teeth, the best time to start is when they're puppies or kittens. Lift their lip on one side and with a gauze on your finger gently brush their teeth in a circular or back and forth motion, start with the front of their teeth and eventually work your way to the back teeth, using a natural toothpaste for pets. Do not use your own toothpaste on your pet (as it could cause stomach problems).
- Feed your pet rice to help move food through the digestive tract more easily.
- Giving your dog chews regularly will help keep the teeth clean too

The Natural Approach

While Western medicine has become the norm in many cultures, it is not the only treatment option. Conventional western medicine, often called allopathic medicine, is the system of medicine taught at most medical schools and most pharmaceutical and synthetic medicines are manufactured and marketed according to the principles of allopathic medicine. Allopathic medicine is also sometimes called orthodox medicine.

Because most of us in the Western world have grown up in a society in which allopathic medicine is the prevailing norm, we forget that, only a few decades ago, homeopathic, herbal and other natural medicines were commonly available – and freely used even by conventional doctors and veterinarians. While there are often heated debates about which system of medicine is 'better' than the other, many responsible doctors and vets (whether they are allopathic or not) recognize that both have a role to play in the treatment program.

Just like humans, domesticated animals like dogs and cats are affected by the health hazards of modern living. Pollution, poor nutrition, stress and unhealthy lifestyles can lead to a variety of illnesses and conditions that are very similar to those experienced by humans. In fact, many, if not most pet health concerns can be addressed by helping your pets to live a healthier lifestyle. While it has its place, conventional medicine for animals and 'modern technology' have failed our pets in many ways.

According to pet expert and author CJ Puotinen, most holistic veterinarians and animal health care professions list annual vaccinations and commercial pet foods as the major contributory cause in the rising rates of chronic illness in pets today. Similarly, Juliette de Bairacli Levy, respected author and renowned animal breeder, points out that contrary to the belief that mass vaccination and antibiotic use will contribute to a decrease in disease, the opposite has in fact proved true. Like their human counterparts, today's pets are becoming more and more vulnerable to chronic disease and ill health. This has led many veterinarians to search for alternatives and to espouse more holistic methods of keeping our pets healthy.

"In the wild, animals instinctively seek out healing herbs to help them when they are ill or undernourished. In fact, Asclepius, the ancient Greek god of medicine, respected dogs very highly for their ability to seek out and eat medicinal herbs in the wild. This ability is shared by other animals, including cats. We are coming to realize that nature often has the answers - but animals have always known this! Natural medicine can help your pet just as it can help you. While there is always a place for conventional veterinary medicine, natural medicine can compliment conventional veterinary care and in many cases do just as well. I have applied the same care and research that have gone into our Native Remedies range for adults and children to the development of pet-friendly, safe and effective natural remedies for animals. As always, all remedies are formulated to the highest therapeutic standards and manufactured under strict pharmaceutical conditions for your peace of mind and the well being of your pets. " Michele Carelse, Clinical Psychologist.

"When a veterinary surgeon practices the use of homeopathic medicine and is asked why he does so, he may give one of several answers. The simple answer would be that the results are good, an emphatic answer would be that homeopathic treatment has no unpleasant or dangerous side effects, while still achieving successful results.
