Pet Bee Stings

What are Bee Stings?

Your pets may love frolicking in the summer grasses, but this can mean exposure to wasps, hornets, biting insects and most commonly, bees. Most bee stings will result in localized pain to the affected area, slight swelling and mild redness. However, depending on the location of the sting (the throat and mouth may result in constriction of the airway) a bee sting may require prompt vet attention.

When the barbed stinger enters your pet's skin, your pet is likely to yelp at the time of the sting, and you may see your pet rubbing the affected part with their paws, or trying to rub their head on the grass – in an attempt to relieve the pain (a swollen muzzle is usually a clear sign of a sting).

When Should I Worry About a Bee Sting?

Bee stings can cause severe reactions. Consult your vet immediately if your pet:

- Experiences major inflammation (especially extending away from the sting site: pay particular note to swelling of the head and neck area)
- Seems disoriented and lethargic
- Has trouble moving or breathing
- Shows physical signs of weakness
- Is anxious in appearance
- Has difficulty swallowing
- Exhibits hyperactivity (such as excessive barking, yipping, groaning)
- Falls or faints (Bee sting reactions can sometimes mimic seizures)

Even if your pet seems fine, watch him or her carefully for 24 hours. If your pet is swarmed by a number of bees, immediate veterinary attention should be sought. Swelling around the face and throat are particularly of concern, and professional treatment should be very prompt in these cases.

If your pet has a severe reaction to a bee sting, an injection of antihistamine, steroid, or adrenaline may be administered to your pet by your vet. Severe reactions may cause the throat to swell, in which case respiratory support may be needed. In the case of a multiple sting injury, intravenous fluids and other intensive support may be required. Oral medications may be prescribed as a follow-up therapy.

able to see the sting imbedded in the skin and protruding upwards. If you are able to, remove the stinger by scraping the visible portion with a card, fingernail, side of butter knife or other thin object.

Don't pull on the stinger – this could cause it to break, pushing more venom into the skin! If you cannot see the stinger, leave it alone, it will eventually be shed out with hair. You may also try placing an ice cube on the site for a few minutes to relieve the pain.

Natural Remedies

There are many herbal and homeopathic remedies that can help to soothe pain and stinging of the skin. Hamamelis virginianum has been used for centuries as a styptic and soothing skin remedy.

Calendula officinalis is a gentle herbal ingredient used to address burning on the skin – with its soothing and calming properties. Melissa officinalis is well-known for its ability to help soothe irritated skin – especially handy in the case of bee stings when used topically.

Tips related to bee stings

- Once the sting is removed – place some baking soda into a bowl.
- Add a small amount of water and mix it into a paste.
- Apply this paste onto the site of the sting to help neutralize pain and swelling.
- Wrap some cloth around the area to prevent your pet licking the area.
- Keep it on for at least 30 minutes.
- Afterwards, simply rinse it off with plain water.

The Natural Approach

While Western medicine has become the norm in many cultures, it is not the only treatment option. Conventional western medicine, often called allopathic medicine, is the system of medicine taught at most medical schools and most pharmaceutical and synthetic medicines are manufactured and marketed according to the principles of allopathic medicine. Allopathic medicine is also sometimes called orthodox medicine.

Because most of us in the Western world have grown up in a society in which allopathic medicine is the prevailing norm, we forget that, only a few decades ago, homeopathic, herbal and other natural medicines were commonly available – and freely used even by conventional doctors and veterinarians. While there are often heated debates about which system of medicine is 'better' than the other, many responsible doctors and vets (whether they are allopathic or not) recognize that both have a role to play in the treatment program.

Just like humans, domesticated animals like dogs and cats are affected by the health hazards of modern living. Pollution, poor nutrition, stress and unhealthy lifestyles can lead to a variety of illnesses and conditions that are very similar to those experienced by humans. In fact, many, if not most pet health concerns can be addressed by helping your pets to live a healthier lifestyle. While it has its place, conventional medicine for animals and 'modern technology' have failed our pets in many ways.

According to pet expert and author CJ Puotinen, most holistic veterinarians and animal health care professions list annual vaccinations and commercial pet foods as the major contributory cause in the rising rates of chronic illness in pets today. Similarly, Juliette de Bairacli Levy, respected author and renowned animal breeder, points out that contrary to the belief that mass vaccination and antibiotic use will contribute to a decrease in disease, the opposite has in fact proved true. Like their human counterparts, today's pets are becoming more and more vulnerable to chronic disease and ill health. This has led many veterinarians to search for alternatives and to espouse more holistic methods of keeping our pets healthy.

"In the wild, animals instinctively seek out healing herbs to help them when they are ill or undernourished. In fact, Asclepius, the ancient Greek god of medicine, respected dogs very highly for their ability to seek out and eat medicinal herbs in the wild. This ability is shared by other animals, including cats. We are coming to realize that nature often has the answers - but animals have always known this! Natural medicine can help your pet just as it can help you. While there is always a place for conventional veterinary medicine, natural medicine can compliment conventional veterinary care and in many cases do just as well. I have applied the same care and research that have gone into our Native Remedies range for adults and children to the development of pet-friendly, safe and effective natural remedies for animals. As always, all remedies are formulated to the highest therapeutic standards and manufactured under strict pharmaceutical conditions for your peace of mind and the well being of your pets." Michele Carelse, Clinical Psychologist.

"When a veterinary surgeon practices the use of homeopathic medicine and is asked why he does so, he may give one of several answers. The simple answer would be that the results are good, an emphatic answer would be that homeopathic treatment has no unpleasant or dangerous side effects, while still achieving successful results.

The PetAlive Homeopathic range has been formulated with this knowledge and is specifically designed to treat your pet in a holistic and natural manner."

Common Questions Asked About Holistic Health Distance Learning Courses:

What is Certification?

Most schools will offer an exam that tests the student's knowledge of the material taught in the respective course. Upon successful completion of this exam, a Certificate or Diploma will be issued by the school attesting that the student has successfully met the requirements as specified by that school. The only governmental recognition of Aromatherapy in North America is the occupational title designation granted to the BCAA under the Societies Act of British Columbia.

What is a Certified Aromatherapist or Reflexologist?

Most prospective students want to know whether taking our courses will lead to their becoming 'Certified' in that healing modality, thereby leading to the title of Certified Aromatherapist, Certified Reflexologist or Certified Color/Crystal Therapist. The answer to this really depends on what you mean by 'Certified.' We believe it can be misleading to purport that completing a course in a healing modality such as reflexology, aromatherapy or color/crystal therapy will lead to a designation of 'Certified' Therapist. These are not official title designations nor are they ones which are recognized by any country's governmental body. All that these titles mean is that this is what an Individual Instructor, School or Institution decided to put on the Diploma it awards those who successfully complete their course.

What is an accredited course in Aromatherapy or Reflexology?

The answer to this will depend on who you are asking. At the present time, British Columbia is the only government to recognize Aromatherapy as a distinct profession and has granted Occupational Title Protection to the members of the BCAA (British Columbia Alliance of Aromatherapy) with the exclusive right for its members to call themselves Registered Aromatherapists (R.A.).

At this time, neither Reflexology nor Color/Crystal Therapy have such occupational designations in any country although one prominent Reflexology school in Colorado, The Modern Institute of Reflexology, has gained occupational designation for their institution in that state. MIR has been designated by the Colorado State Division of Private Occupational Schools - Dept. of Higher Education as an approved school. Our Reflexologist who developed the reflexology modules for our courses was trained at MIR as a Certified Reflexologist, a Master Reflexologist and a Dr. of Reflexology.

In the United States, the NAHA (National Association for Holistic Aromatherapy) has put into place their Approved Standards for Aromatherapy Training. The Alternative Healing Academy's Advanced Aromatherapy course meets and exceeds these standards and we are in the application process of becoming an approved program through the NAHA.

In Canada, there are a number of different Associations including the BCAPA (British Columbia Association of Practicing Aromatherapists) and the CFA (Canadian Federation of Aromatherapists). Time will tell if one authoritative body or association becomes the standard by which to judge and govern the educational offerings of these alternative healing modalities.

It has to be noted that NO form of aromatherapy "certification" is currently recognized in the USA by anyone other than those in the trade, nor is aromatherapy (or essential oils in the aromatherapy trade) regulated by any governmental body.

Some information about the courses we offer:

1) You can receive the course in one of two ways: A cd with the modules and tests in PDF format can be shipped to you; or, The modules can be emailed to you three at a time. Each time you complete the tests for the current three modules, a new set of three modules will be emailed to you.

4) A tutor will be available via email to answer any questions you may have.

You will be contacted after purchase to find out how you would like your course delivered. All tests for the course can be either emailed or snail-mailed to The Alternative Healing Academy.

Upon successful completion of any full diploma or certification course (with a score of 80% or higher), you will receive a beautiful Diploma, suitable for framing.
