Bruxism

What is Bruxism?

Bruxism refers to an excessive clenching together of the bottom and upper jaw, accompanied by the grinding of the lower set of teeth with the upper set. Most people are unaware that they are grinding or gnashing their teeth because it frequently occurs at night (referred to as sleep bruxism). Usually, it is only when someone points it out that people with bruxism become aware that they are grinding their teeth.

Bruxism affects adults and children, and although not usually a serious medical problem, it can wreak havoc in the mouth, causing teeth to loosen and become painful. Parts of the teeth sometimes break, having been ground away completely. This can lead to jaw joint disorders, pain, headaches, earaches, damaged teeth, and abrasions in the mouth.

Diagnosing Bruxism

It is important if you experience bruxism symptoms that you seek proper diagnosis and treatment. Bruxism symptoms include:

- Teeth grinding and teeth clenching
- Facial pain
- Headaches
- Oversensitive teeth
- Tongue indentations
- Damage to the tooth enamel, causing the inside of the tooth to be exposed

What Causes Bruxism?

The exact causes of bruxism are not exactly known, but a combination of factors may contribute to the problem. Factors that could trigger bruxism symptoms include:

- Anger, pain or frustration
- Anxiety, stress or tension
- Certain personality types (particularly, aggressive, competitive or hyperactive personalities)
- Malocclusion (teeth that are not aligned properly)
- Posture
- Diet and sleeping habits

There are a number of ways to treat bruxism. The aim of treatment is to alleviate pain, prevent permanent damage to teeth, and change teeth clenching behaviors as much as possible.

If you suspect that you may be suffering from bruxism, you should consult your dentist. The dentist would most likely recommend a mouth guard to prevent teeth grinding together.

Solutions for bruxism include surgery, but is only recommended in extreme cases. Medications administered to treat this condition are usually muscle relaxants or mild sleeping aids.

Other solutions for bruxism such as natural and alternative therapies have proven to be beneficial in reducing the bruxism symptoms and promoting nerve health. These therapies include:

- Biofeedback
- Hypnosis
- Stress management
- Relaxation therapy and meditation

Herbal remedies also offer solutions for bruxism since they can relieve common nervous tension and help to soothe the emotional problems causing teeth grinding and teeth clenching. These include Hypericum perforatum (St. John's Wort), Passiflora incarnata, Melissa officinalis and Lavender. Homeopathic ingredients such as Phytolacca, Zinc and Arsenicum can also provide a safe, non-addictive alternative to traditional medications.

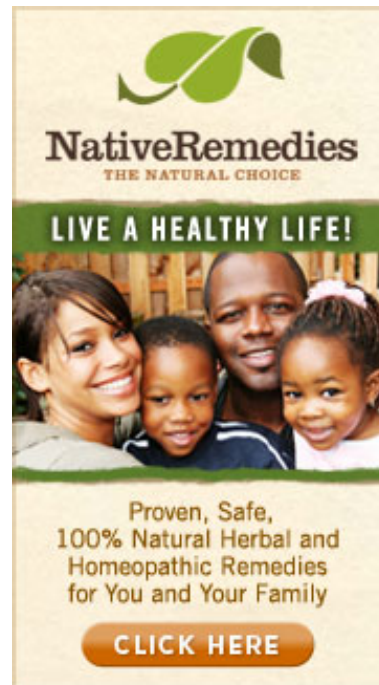

Try herbal teas of hops, passion flower, peppermint or lemon balm to soothe and calm your nerves and provide deep relaxation when you are feeling anxious and stressed. Consult a homeopath or herbalist for advice on incorporating natural therapies into your treatment plan.

The Natural Approach

While Western medicine has become the norm in many cultures, it is not the only treatment option. Conventional Western medicine (often called allopathic or orthodox medicine) is the system of medicine taught at most medical schools, and many pharmaceutical and synthetic medicines are manufactured and marketed according to the principles of allopathic medicine.

Because most of us in the Western world have grown up in a society in which allopathic medicine is the prevailing norm, we forget that only a few decades ago, homeopathic, herbal and other natural medicines were commonly available and freely used-- even by conventional doctors. While there are often heated debates about which system of medicine is 'better' than the other, many responsible doctors (whether they are allopathic or not) recognize that both have a role to play in the treatment program.

Natural medicine has often been frowned upon by conventional doctors, especially by those who do not have sufficient knowledge of these medicines. However, it is encouraging to note that some medical schools are now beginning to re-introduce it into their course work, thereby providing doctors with a wider range of treatment options from which to choose. In many countries, especially in Europe, India and China, natural and homeopathic medicines are commonly prescribed by conventional doctors and represent a significant part of the total annual drug sales.

All of our natural remedies are formulated by our expert team of herbalists, naturopaths and homeopaths, and headed by Michele Carelse.

In addition, she is a trained Clinical Psychologist and has been incorporating natural remedies into her treatment of patients with depression, anxiety, ADD, ADHD and stress for many years with spectacular results.

Naturopathy is a branch of medicine (just as allopathy is a branch of medicine) which operates according to the underlying philosophy that the body has an innate capacity to heal itself. While natural medicines are often called 'alternative' or 'complimentary' medicines, they are, in fact, a unique and independent form of medicine in their own right, well able to treat a variety of conditions. Perhaps the term 'holistic' medicine is more apt, given the broad range of treatment options and approaches which are to be found within the practice of natural medicine. This encompasses many different disciplines, including herbalism, homeopathy, iridology, osteopathy, chiropractic, therapeutic massage techniques, aromatherapy, acupuncture and many, many more.

Most naturopaths will use a variety of treatment modalities in order to treat their patients in a holistic way to support health, relieve symptoms and prevent future disease. In fact, even the World Health Organization defines health as being "... more than simply the absence of illness. It is the active state of physical, emotional, mental and social well-being." This is a wonderfully clear description of holistic or natural medicine, which strives to support health (thereby relieving or preventing symptoms), rather than simply eliminating disease.

Although allopathic medicine certainly has a role to play and has made a tremendous contribution to medical science during the past century, there is a growing perception that it is not the only answer. In many cases, holistic medicine can accomplish just as much, if not more – without the risk of side effects, addiction and sacrifice to health so commonly associated with pharmaceutical drugs. Contrary to common perception, and provided that they are manufactured in the correct way, natural medicines can work quickly and safely to promote healing.

In many cases, they can succeed where pharmaceutical drugs have failed. Despite frequent reports that they are 'unproven' and 'untested', the opposite is true. Natural medicines have a long history of usage and there is a wealth of empirical evidence to support their effectiveness and safety. In addition, active clinical research is carried out by many academic hospitals and universities to support the extensive traditional and empirical evidence behind natural medicines.

It is also important to know that, like any medicine, herbal and homeopathic medicines must be manufactured in the correct way, following acceptable procedures and manufacturing methods to ensure maximum effectiveness and safety. Due to the recent rise in popularity of natural remedies, many companies have sprung up to take advantage of the market. Unfortunately, not all of them are equipped to manufacture to the correct standards, often resulting in a flood of inferior (and sometimes even unsafe) remedies onto the market – and giving natural remedies a bad name.

Even some pharmaceutical companies have rushed to claim their market share by producing so-called 'standardized' extracts of herbs and offering these as superior to the tried and tested methods of naturopathic manufacturing. Nothing could be further from the truth. While 'standardized' extracts may offer benefit of easy consistency of dosage (and cheaper more efficient production lines), they have grave disadvantages, including an increase in side effects, as the medicines produced in this manner lose the natural protective properties of the herbs. In some cases, these side effects have proved fatal – as was seen in the liver toxicity associated with standardized extracts of kava kava, a herb previously safely used for generations without any known side effects.

Most naturopaths recommend what is called the Full Spectrum Method of extraction – which retains the benefits of ALL the active ingredients within the herb as opposed to isolating only one – thereby providing a more complete treatment as well as superior protection against side effects.

Whatever your choice, always choose wisely. Research what is best for you. If you have a chronic or life-threatening condition, don't make changes without first discussing them with your doctor, in order that your condition may be monitored. Well-informed and supportive practitioners will support patients who want to take responsibility for their own health.
