What is Cancer?

Cancer is a broad term used to describe a number of diseases characterized by the growth and development of abnormal cells. When damage occurs to the DNA of normal cells, these cells can begin to grow out of control and divide into new abnormal or cancerous cells.

These cancerous cells then begin to grow all the while replacing and destroying normal tissue and they can eventually spread to other areas of the body in a process known as metastasis. In many cases, a tumor or cancerous tissue develops, although this is not always the case, such as with leukemia.

A diagnosis of cancer for oneself, or a loved one can be a devastating blow. With the word cancer come a multitude of fears and worries – however, it is important to note that Cancer can be beaten. In today's world, cancer can be successfully treated and in many cases cured all together. That is not to say that cancer is not a serious and ever growing concern that seems to be on the increase.

Just as there are a number of environmental triggers that are said to cause cancer, so there is a long list of types of cancer that can develop. These range from cancer of the blood or leukemia, hormone related cancers such as prostate cancer and breast cancer, and cancer that starts in various organs and tissues of the body such as colon cancer or lung cancer.

Diagnosing Cancer

For some, cancer is only discovered when symptoms appear or during a routine physical examination. However, there is a growing trend towards various screening tests that can help pick up cancer in its early stages before symptoms appear.

In most cases, the earlier the cancer is discovered, the better the chances for successful treatment and cure. Screening tests will depend on risk factors specific to the individual such as age, heredity previous medical history and lifestyle factors such as smoking and obesity

If your health care provider suspects you have cancer he or she will probably recommend some form of imaging test such as an x-ray, ultrasound, computed tomography (CT), or magnetic resonance imaging (MRI).

This will determine the presence and location of any abnormal mass in the body; however these tests will not be able to determine if the mass is cancerous. Cancer can only be confirmed by examining the tissue for cancer cells and therefore a biopsy of the affected area is usually necessary, although, in some cases a blood test is sufficient, as is the case with leukemia.

What causes Cancer?

There are a number of different factors such as genetics, age, immune system functioning, environmental toxicity, illnesses, as well as diet and life-style factors which have been implicated in playing a role in the development of cancer.

While much of the research points to the evidence that cancer is a genetic illness, it is also becoming clear that genetic predispositions are triggered by environmental cancer-causing agents or carcinogens. These carcinogens can trigger the genetic mutation which starts the process of cancer.

Examples of environmental factors include cigarette smoke, radiation from the sun and various chemical that we are exposed to through environmental toxicity or pollution and processed foods.

Help for Cancer

There are a number of treatment options which will depend on the type of cancer, the stage of the cancer and individual factors such as age, health and personal preferences. Speak to your health care provider regarding which treatment option would best suit you.

The three main conventional treatment options are surgery, radiation therapy and chemotherapy.

- Surgery – In many cases, the surgical removal of the cancer is the most effective treatment method. However, this is not always possible and can prove to be inappropriate when the cancer has spread to other areas of the body, or when the cancer is not localized to a specific area, as is the case in leukaemia (cancer of the white blood cells). In addition, other treatment options such as chemotherapy may be recommended as well as surgery to make sure any remaining cancerous cells are destroyed.
- Radiation Therapy – Radiation therapy involves the use of high-energy rays to kill cancer cells. The treatment is localized so that it only targets the cancerous mass within the body while surrounding cells are left either unharmed or temporarily damaged. Depending on the location of the cancer and the course of treatment, radiation therapy can cause a number of side-effects such as fatigue, loss of appetite nausea, diarrhea, and the suppression of the immune system, however, the actual process is not a painful one.
- Chemotherapy – Chemotherapy is the best option for those whose cancer has spread to other areas of the body. It is also recommended in cases where surgery and radiation therapy cannot remove all traces of cancer. Chemotherapy uses chemical drugs to kill the cancer cells. Each person reacts differently to chemotherapy and side-effects are vast depending on what chemical combinations are used and at what dose. Common side-effects include nausea, vomiting hair loss lowered immune system and fatigue.

In addition, she is a trained Clinical Psychologist and has been incorporating natural remedies into her treatment of patients with depression, anxiety, ADD, ADHD and stress for many years with spectacular results.

There are a number of things that you can do to improve your overall health as well as optimize your chances of becoming or staying cancer-free.

- Stop smoking. Tobacco greatly increases the chances of developing cancer, as well as the likelihood of some types of cancer returning after successful treatment. Quitting smoking is no easy achievement so consider quitting smoking naturally using herbal and homeopathic ingredients to help along the way.
- Exercise regularly! Exercising for 30 min five days out of the week can greatly reduce the chances of developing cancer. If you are currently undergoing cancer treatment then moderate exercise can keep you feeling healthy and strong and will help to reduce the tiredness and side-effects caused by the cancer treatments. Be sure to consult your health care provider before starting any new exercise routine.
- Eat a healthy balanced diet and manage your weight. Make sure your diet is rich in fiber and fresh organic foods and low in saturated fats. When ever possible, avoid processed foods which are full of synthetic ingredients like colorants, artificial flavorings and preservatives.
- Limit alcohol consumption. Excessive or moderate daily drinking may increase the risk of developing certain cancers especially for those people with a family history of cancer.
- Protect yourself from the harmful rays of the sun. Make sure you keep a bottle of sun block close at hand and that it is applied liberally when you are in the sun. Not only do the sun's UV rays cause skin cancer but chemo and radiation therapy can also increase the skin's sensitivity to the sun's harmful effects.
- See your doctor for regular check-ups so that your general health and recovery can be closely monitored.
- Discuss supplementation with your health provider. Certain supplements have proven cancer prevention properties, particularly Vitamins C and E and the mineral selenium.
- Read as widely as possible in order to be fully informed about available cancer treatments and prevention programs.

Natural Herbal and Homeopathic Remedies related to Cancer

Conventional treatments for cancer have come a long way over the last few years, and while they can be very effective, their side effects and consequences are often very harsh and they can even have a detrimental effect on the health of the rest of the body.

For this reason, many people are exploring natural remedies as a holistic approach to preventing and treating cancer along-side conventional methods.

There are a number of herbal ingredients that have been used successfully in both the prevention and the treatment of cancer. These include Sutherlandia frutescens (Cancer Bush), Indian ginseng, Turmeric and Mistletoe, all of which are known for their ant-tumor or anti-oxidant properties.

In addition, herbal ingredients can be used to help boost the immune system after harsh conventional treatments. Natural ingredients that strengthen the

The Natural Approach

While Western medicine has become the norm in many cultures, it is not the only treatment option. Conventional western medicine, often called allopathic medicine, is the system of medicine taught at most medical schools and most pharmaceutical and synthetic medicines are manufactured and marketed according to the principles of allopathic medicine. Allopathic medicine is also sometimes called orthodox medicine.

Because most of us in the Western world have grown up in a society in which allopathic medicine is the prevailing norm, we forget that, only a few decades ago, homeopathic, herbal and other natural medicines were commonly available – and freely used even by conventional doctors. While there are often heated debates about which system of medicine is ‘better’ than the other, many responsible doctors (whether they are allopathic or not) recognize that both have a role to play in the treatment program.

Natural medicine has often been frowned on by conventional doctors, especially by those who did not have sufficient knowledge of these medicines. However, it is encouraging to note that some medical schools are now beginning to re-introduce it into their course work, thereby providing doctors with a wider range of treatment options from which to choose. In many countries, especially in Europe, India and China, natural and homeopathic medicines are commonly prescribed by conventional doctors and represent a significant part of the total annual drug sales.

Naturopathy is a branch of medicine (just as allopathy is a branch of medicine) which operates according to the underlying philosophy that the body has an innate capacity to heal itself. While natural medicines are often called ‘alternative’ or ‘complimentary’ medicines, they are, in fact, a unique and independent form of medicine in their own right, well able to treat a variety of conditions. Perhaps the term ‘holistic’ medicine is more apt, given the broad range of treatment options and approaches which are to be found within the practice of natural medicine, which encompasses many different disciplines, including herbalism, homeopathy, iridology, osteopathy, chiropractic, therapeutic massage techniques, aromatherapy, acupuncture and many, many more.

Most naturopaths will use a variety of treatment modalities in order to treat their patients in a holistic way to support health, relieve symptoms and prevent future disease. In fact, even the World Health Organization defines health as being "... more than simply the absence of illness. It is the active state of physical, emotional, mental and social well-being." This is a wonderfully clear description of holistic or natural medicine, which strives to support health (thereby relieving or preventing symptoms), rather than simply eliminating disease.

Although allopathic medicine certainly has a role to play and has made a tremendous contribution to medical science during the past century, there is a growing perception that it is not the only answer and that, in many cases, holistic medicine can accomplish just as much, if not more – without the risk of side effects, addiction and sacrifice to health so commonly associated with pharmaceutical drugs. Contrary to common perception, and provided that they are manufactured in the correct way, natural medicines can work quickly and safely to promote healing.

In many cases, they can succeed where pharmaceutical drugs have failed. Despite frequent reports that they are ‘unproven’ and ‘untested’, the opposite is true. Natural medicines have a long history of usage and there is a wealth of empirical evidence to support their effectiveness and safety. In addition, active clinical research is carried out by many academic hospitals and universities to support the extensive traditional and empirical evidence behind natural medicines.

It is also important to know that, like any medicine, herbal and homeopathic medicines must be manufactured in the correct way, following acceptable procedures and manufacturing methods to ensure maximum effectiveness and safety. Due to the recent rise in popularity of natural remedies, many companies have sprung up to take advantage of the market. Unfortunately not all of them are equipped to manufacture to the correct standards, often resulting in a flood of inferior (and sometimes even unsafe) remedies onto the market – and giving natural remedies a bad name.

Even some pharmaceutical companies have rushed to claim their market share by producing so-called ‘standardized’ extracts of herbs and offering these as superior to the tried and tested methods of naturopathic manufacturing. Nothing could be further from the truth. While ‘standardized’ extracts may offer benefit of easy consistency of dosage (and cheaper more efficient production lines), they have grave disadvantages. These include an increase in side effects as the medicines produced in this manner lose the natural protective properties of the herbs. In some cases, these side effects have proved fatal – as was seen in the liver toxicity associated with standardized extracts of kava kava, a herb previously safely used for generations without any known side effects.

Most naturopaths recommend what is called the Full Spectrum Method of extraction – which retains the benefits of ALL the active ingredients within the herb as opposed to isolating only one – thereby providing a more complete treatment as well as superior protection against side effects.

Whatever your choice, always choose wisely. Research what is best for you. If you have a chronic or life threatening condition, don’t make changes without first discussing them with your doctor in order that your condition may be monitored. Well informed and supportive practitioners will support patients who want to take responsibility for their own health.

Common Questions Asked About Holistic Health Distance Learning Courses:

What is Certification?

Most schools will offer an exam that tests the student's knowledge of the material taught in the respective course. Upon successful completion of this exam, a Certificate or Diploma will be issued by the school attesting that the student has successfully met the requirements as specified by that school. The only governmental recognition of Aromatherapy in North America is the occupational title designation granted to the BCAA under the Societies Act of British Columbia.

What is a Certified Aromatherapist or Reflexologist?

Most prospective students want to know whether taking our courses will lead to their becoming 'Certified' in that healing modality, thereby leading to the title of Certified Aromatherapist, Certified Reflexologist or Certified Color/Crystal Therapist. The answer to this really depends on what you mean by 'Certified.' We believe it can be misleading to purport that completing a course in a healing modality such as reflexology, aromatherapy or color/crystal therapy will lead to a designation of 'Certified' Therapist. These are not official title designations nor are they ones which are recognized by any country's governmental body. All that these titles mean is that this is what an Individual Instructor, School or Institution decided to put on the Diploma it awards those who successfully complete their course.

What is an accredited course in Aromatherapy or Reflexology?

The answer to this will depend on who you are asking. At the present time, British Columbia is the only government to recognize Aromatherapy as a distinct profession and has granted Occupational Title Protection to the members of the BCAA (British Columbia Alliance of Aromatherapy) with the exclusive right for its members to call themselves Registered Aromatherapists (R.A.).

At this time, neither Reflexology nor Color/Crystal Therapy have such occupational designations in any country although one prominent Reflexology school in Colorado, The Modern Institute of Reflexology, has gained occupational designation for their institution in that state. MIR has been designated by the Colorado State Division of Private Occupational Schools - Dept. of Higher Education as an approved school. Our Reflexologist who developed the reflexology modules for our courses was trained at MIR as a Certified Reflexologist, a Master Reflexologist and a Dr. of Reflexology.

In the United States, the NAHA (National Association for Holistic Aromatherapy) has put into place their Approved Standards for Aromatherapy Training. The Alternative Healing Academy's Advanced Aromatherapy course meets and exceeds these standards and we are in the application process of becoming an approved program through the NAHA.

In Canada, there are a number of different Associations including the BCAPA (British Columbia Association of Practicing Aromatherapists) and the CFA (Canadian Federation of Aromatherapists). Time will tell if one authoritative body or association becomes the standard by which to judge and govern the educational offerings of these alternative healing modalities.

It has to be noted that NO form of aromatherapy "certification" is currently recognized in the USA by anyone other than those in the trade, nor is aromatherapy (or essential oils in the aromatherapy trade) regulated by any governmental body.

Some information about the courses we offer:
