Pet Lyme Disease

What is Low Energy?

Is your pet listless all the time? Does your dog or cat lack the energy to play, run or exercise? As a responsible pet owner, you should take note of any physical or behavioral changes that may accompany low energy levels. If symptoms persist, consult your vet.

Diagnosing Low Energy

A thorough physical examination and a series of diagnostic tests such as a complete blood count, biochemic profile, x-rays, ultrasound, urine, fecal and blood samples including an eye and neurological examination will be performed to rule out any other disorders.

What Causes Low Energy?

Low energy may be a symptom of various underlying systemic disorders such as anemia, intestinal worms, hypothyroidism, diabetes, liver and kidney disease, digestive disorders, cardiovascular disorders, respiratory disorders and cancer. Obesity, heat stroke, depression, nutritional deficiencies, an inadequate diet, exposure to toxins even boredom can contribute low energy levels and a decrease in activity.

Help for Low Energy

Treatment will be based on treating the underlying cause and certain medications will be prescribed. However, to increase energy and vigor in your pet, always feed your pet a healthy, well balanced diet.

Most sluggishness and health problems are related to poor dietary requirements – your pet should be eating a high quality diet containing fiber, vitamin-rich fish oils for a healthy skin and coat, essential vitamins and minerals to strengthen the immune system and healthy grains to boost energy levels. Encourage exercise and play in your pet from an early age, supplement with the appropriate vitamins and have routine visits to your local vet to promote overall health and well-being.

Natural remedies

Natural remedies have a long history of restoring energy levels, new found vigor and stamina in both humans and pets. Herbal and homeopathic remedies are safe, gentle and effective without any harsh side effects.

Carefully selected herbs such as Eleutherococcus senticosus (Siberian Ginseng), Rosmarinus officinalis (Rosemary), Arthrospira platenis (Spirulina) and Emblica officinalis (Amalaki) act as an invigorating tonic to enhance energy within the body and sharpen physical and mental performance as well as endurance.

Tips to Increase Energy Levels

There are a number of things that you can do to restore energy levels in your pet, and these include:

- Feed your pet high quality, commercial food or an all natural diet without preservatives, additives and colorants
- Always ensure that your pet has fresh, clean water available and that he drinks regularly to avoid dehydration
- Exercise your pet regularly to keep him healthy and fit
- Avoid exposing your pet to toxins and chemicals such as household detergents, pesticides and fertilizers
- De-worm your dog or cat regularly
- Update your pet's vaccinations
- Take your pet for annual check ups at your vet

The Natural Approach

While Western medicine has become the norm in many cultures, it is not the only treatment option. Conventional western medicine, often called allopathic medicine, is the system of medicine taught at most medical schools and most pharmaceutical and synthetic medicines are manufactured and marketed according to the principles of allopathic medicine. Allopathic medicine is also sometimes called orthodox medicine.

Because most of us in the Western world have grown up in a society in which allopathic medicine is the prevailing norm, we forget that, only a few decades ago, homeopathic, herbal and other natural medicines were commonly available – and freely used even by conventional doctors and veterinarians. While there are often heated debates about which system of medicine is 'better' than the other, many responsible doctors and vets (whether they are allopathic or not) recognize that both have a role to play in the treatment program.

Just like humans, domesticated animals like dogs and cats are affected by the health hazards of modern living. Pollution, poor nutrition, stress and unhealthy lifestyles can lead to a variety of illnesses and conditions that are very similar to those experienced by humans. In fact, many, if not most pet health concerns can be addressed by helping your pets to live a healthier lifestyle. While it has its place, conventional medicine for animals and 'modern technology' have failed our pets in many ways.

According to pet expert and author CJ Puotinen, most holistic veterinarians and animal health care professions list annual vaccinations and commercial pet foods as the major contributory cause in the rising rates of chronic illness in pets today. Similarly, Juliette de Bairacli Levy, respected author and renowned animal breeder, points out that contrary to the belief that mass vaccination and antibiotic use will contribute to a decrease in disease, the opposite has in fact proved true. Like their human counterparts, today's pets are becoming more and more vulnerable to chronic disease and ill health. This has led many veterinarians to search for alternatives and to espouse more holistic methods of keeping our pets healthy.

"In the wild, animals instinctively seek out healing herbs to help them when they are ill or undernourished. In fact, Asclepius, the ancient Greek god of medicine, respected dogs very highly for their ability to seek out and eat medicinal herbs in the wild. This ability is shared by other animals, including cats. We are coming to realize that nature often has the answers - but animals have always known this! Natural medicine can help your pet just as it can help you. While there is always a place for conventional veterinary medicine, natural medicine can compliment conventional veterinary care and in many cases do just as well. I have applied the same care and research that have gone into our Native Remedies range for adults and children to the development of pet-friendly, safe and effective natural remedies for animals. As always, all remedies are formulated to the highest therapeutic standards and manufactured under strict pharmaceutical conditions for your peace of mind and the well being of your pets. " Michele Carelse, Clinical Psychologist.

"When a veterinary surgeon practices the use of homeopathic medicine and is asked why he does so, he may give one of several answers. The simple answer would be that the results are good, an emphatic answer would be that homeopathic treatment has no unpleasant or dangerous side effects, while still achieving successful results.

The PetAlive Homeopathic range has been formulated with this knowledge and is specifically designed to treat your pet in a holistic and natural manner."
