Falling Back to Nature

We strive to always bring you the latest information on ADD/ADHD news so you can make the best choices for you and your family's health - as well as provide insight onto how taking a holistic approach to health can reap many short and long-term wellness benefits.

In addition, maintaining a strong immune system means that you may be able to ward off illness. Especially for those with ADD/ADHD, adding a cold and flu remedy to the mix can potentially aggravate symptoms.

As optimum health occurs when all systems of the body are in balance, it makes sense that a balanced diet plays an important role in maintaining brain health and functioning, as studies show that what we ingest can directly affect behaviors.

Misdiagnosis continues to be a prevalent topic of concern, among the medical community as well as across demographic groups. From

Colds, the Flu, ADD/ADHD & YOU

Can OTC cold & flu medicine can affect symptoms?

Although staying healthy as seasons change is important for everyone... it is especially true for those with ADD/ADHD. Did you know that adding a cold and flu remedy to the mix can potentially aggravate ADD/ADHD symptoms?

Most common cold medicines have some side effects on the central nervous system, which can be unpredictable. While some people may experience drowsiness, dizziness, insomnia, or upset stomach, others may experience a rapid heart beat or hyperactivity.

Over-the-counter cough and cold medicine can be dangerous if more than the recommended amount is used, if it is given too frequently, or if more than one cough and cold medicine containing the same active ingredient are being taken at the same time.

Drug interactions between cough and cold medicines and any other medication that a child might be taking must always be considered, especially medications for ADD/ADHD, depression, or anxiety. Always consult your doctor or pharmacist.

Are the Foods You're Eating Doing More Harm than Good? Find Out...

The old adage You Are What You Eat is rings even truer when you consider that the foods you eat can be doing your body more harm than good.

While prescription medications are often used even though they can cause significant side effects, most people are not aware of the importance of nutritional intake.

Studies show that the foods you eat can have significant effects on behavior and can work for you or against you. This is especially true if you are struggling with ADD/ADHD.

Making changes in diet may be a trial and error process to uncover the best approach. People may be affected differently from additives to sugar, which can cause mixed behaviors, from hyperactivity to cognitive functioning.

Most of us can relate to the effects food can have on behaviors from comparing how we feel after eating a meal consisting of fresh, unprocessed foods like vegetables or broiled fish versus a high-fat, sugar-laden meal from a fast food chain.

Often after eating the latter, our body feels sluggish, weak, and often plagued by indigestion. For someone suffering from symptoms of ADD/ADHD, it can thus be seen how increasing intake of substances that alter behaviors in a negative way is thus detrimental.

Furthermore, since food is such a factor that we have relatively high control over, why not consider experimenting with it?

Especially this time of year-with Halloween candy galore-pay attention to some of the biggest culprits. Sugar and artificial additives are the two biggest contributors that may allegedly exacerbate the effects of ADD/ADHD.

A former research scientist and current clinical nutritionist at Stanford University Medical Center, Marcia Zimmerman explains that the foundation of a food-based approach to brain health of ADD/ADHD kids and adults is stabilizing blood sugar levels, which includes not only eating the right foods, but also eating smaller, healthy meals throughout the day to maintain a steady flow of energy.

As the brain needs glucose to function, if too much sugar is ingested, the body does not know how to function with the overload. Following the food pyramid and including healthy amounts of proteins, carbs, dairy and whole-grains may be a good start for getting the recommended daily values of nutritional needs to maintain balance and processing of glucose in the system.

In addition, the debate continues whether or not food additives actually add to the symptoms of ADD/ADHD. A couple of British studies found that certain food dyes and preservatives may be linked to adverse effects on behavior, as they interfere with concentration.

Even if there isn't a direct link back to ADD/ADHD, ingesting anything genetically modified, artificially created, or raised with hormones can still cause negative effects on overall health, as the body is likely not getting enough vital nutrients.

Healthy eating provides the brain with the nutrition it needs to function at its best, as many herbs and vitamins that promote mental focus can be attained through diet. Deficiency in the minerals and vitamins that are essential for health, even if a healthy diet is followed, can result in poor health or even disease.

cellular health, namely minerals or tissue salts.

Tissue salts, also called cell salts or biochemic salts, are composed of minerals that occur naturally at a cellular level in our bodies and all organic matter on earth (plants, rocks, and soil).

Each tissue salt plays a different yet vital role in maintaining cellular health in the organs and systems of the body. Ensuring the healthy functioning of all brain and nervous system cells enhances the bioavailability of supplements, remedies, and even nutrients in your diet.

What's very important to remember and consider is that wellness is not limited to one aspect of life... both psychological and physical health are dependant upon each other, and a proper balance must be found for optimum health to be achieved.

Recent estimates show at least one in three children are wrongly diagnosed with the ADD/ADHD, says a group of senior medical experts from Australia. This goes a long way to demonstrate that the misdiagnosis of ADD/ADHD is a mounting problem.

These researchers indicated that there is no proven evidence of the long-term benefits of typically prescribed medications for ADD/ADHD. With all the possible side effects caused by prescription medication, this truly gives ADD/ADHD sufferers, or their parents, something to consider.

In addition to the health dangers imposed on children from needlessly taking medication, being improperly labeled as a child with a "learning disability" can have a detrimental effect on self-esteem and social development, and can even affect other children.

There is also a lack of sufficient diagnosis procedures currently established for general practitioners to follow to properly identify the disorder.

Since schools often place children classified with ADD/ADHD into special classes or programs, an overabundance of students in this category leads to schools competing for proper funding-leading to children who may really require the extra assistance to not receive the help they need.

This is a problem rampant not only abroad but also in the United States, affecting children with not only ADD/ADHD, but also disorders like autism and cerebral palsy-who end up competing for the same grant pool and teaching time.

Further, researchers conclude that ADD/ADHD is too complex a disorder to be flippantly diagnosed in a general practitioner's office by a quick analysis of symptoms. There is no single test that will identify ADD/ADHD, and there are no specific genetic or biological indicators that will lead to a diagnosis.

Instead, it is necessary to consult a doctor who will conduct a comprehensive evaluation which will include extensive examination of past behavior, and should also include a physical exam to rule out any other possible source of the symptoms.

Before concluding that your child might have ADHD and needs expert help, it is important to assess the behavior of your child over a period of time, which should be at least six months and under different situations.

And if your child is actually diagnosed, or you would just like to support learning and concentration, there are many natural remedies that can maintain brain health and optimize functioning.

Now we don't have the teacher calling us to tell us what he did wrong in school but to give us glowing reports of how wonderful it was to have him in school! Yesterday he came home with a WOW! sticker on his shirt for such GREAT behavior at school. THANK YOU SO MUCH. I am telling everyone I know about your wonderful products and you will have a customer for life!" - Gerri, AK, USA

"I developed BrightSpark™ as a homeopathic remedy to assist me in the treatment of children in my clinical practice. This remedy has been very effective in helping children who presented with difficulties in concentration and appropriate classroom behavior due to a tendency to be impulsive, overly stimulated and restless, often along with irritable mood and a resistance to parental discipline. Many of these children went from being the classroom clown to willingly settling down to complete tasks, while still retaining brightness and creativity - to the great relief of parents and teachers alike!" - Michele Carelse, Clinical Psychologist

Reigning in ADD/ADHD with Recess

How the benefits extend far beyond exercise

According to a recent report from the National Association of Early Childhood Specialists, almost 40% of elementary schools have cut out recess (in the United State) from their scheduled curriculums.

For students suffering from ADD/ADHD, the cut may mean more disruptive behavior- as well as potentially forcing children into unnatural methods of treatment to stifle excess energy that could just naturally be expended by half an hour of playtime.

The rationale behind the modified or deleted time for unrestricted play is to allow more classroom time for core subjects like reading, math, and science. However, research has shown that ADD/ADHD children who are allowed an allotted time for recess:

- Perform better academically with an increased ability to stay focused and on task
- Are less fidgety
- Show improved overall behavior

However, the benefits of recess apply to all children, including those who do not suffer from learning and concentration difficulties. Movement and playtime allow for the physical and social development of all children, helping fight obesity, maintaining positive mood by relieving stress, and improving relationships-which therefore have a great impact on self-esteem and emotional happiness.

By omitting recess, not only are children losing out on all the benefits physical exercise can provide, but they are also having to contend with medications forced upon them by their inability to settle down (which distracts other students).

Just as adults aren't forced to adhere to non-stop work days, students shouldn't have such unrealistic expectations placed upon them, either. In addition, many schools that do still allow time for recess aren't scheduling it for the most effective time-many curriculums fit it in before or after lunch, or as the last period of the day. Shorter breaks throughout the day proved to be much better at helping children relax, expend energy, and then refocus attention.

While you may or may not be able to fight the school's decision whether or not to allow recess (or its scheduled time), there are still effective natural solutions you can implement to help provide your child with a successful time at school.

Herbal and homeopathic remedies can encourage normal and efficient concentration and memory functioning without compromising health or risking serious side effects. In addition, it often takes a combination of treatment methods to find a complete solution for learning and concentration challenges... and not just finding a "quick fix", masking symptoms and disregarding the root of the problem.

Learn more about how herbal + homeopathic remedies can provide a complete solution

Natural remedies have been used in traditional medicine for thousands of years to support the healthy functioning of the brain and nervous system, helping to provide safe, effective support for learning and concentration difficulties.

Incorporating changes in a number of areas including diet, lifestyle, surroundings and emotional elements can also be very beneficial in promoting overall health. For instance, you can encourage your child to participate either in organized sports or solo recreational play after school before beginning homework, allowing time for a mental break and release of energy.

In combination with a healthy lifestyle, natural remedies can help both children and adults to maintain healthy consistent behavior, clear focus, and optimum performance by providing a sound platform to support wellness and vitality.

"When my son was in 2nd grade, we were told he had great difficulty paying attention in class. We looked for a natural alternative to the sedative-like drugs used to calm kids. We tried Focus Formula™ on him. The results are amazing. There are still moments when we have to make him sit and focus on what he is doing, but no more running around in class, kicking the next kid in their desk, blurting out answers. "The teachers complained that my daughter wouldn't wait her turn at school and she bullied the other kids and started to scream whenever she wanted a toy. How terrible is that for a mother to hear? Even my neighbor complained about the screaming every day and she has five kids!! Since she has been taking Tula Tantrum Tamer™ there is such a big improvement. It feels so good to be able to be proud of my child when I pick her up from school!" - Rose W.

Fight for Your (Child's) Right... for Recess!

As we have read, even with strong medical evidence indicating that exercise positively impacts a child's ability to concentrate, parents still struggle with schools to keep recess in the schedule.

For parents hoping to advocate recess in their local school districts, there are strategies that may help.

- Change begins at home.

In order to best educate policymakers and form the best platform in favor of recess, it's critical that you educate yourself with all vital information, research, and statistics available.

- Communicate with other parents.

The more vocal you are about the benefits of recess, the more a "win by numbers" approach may work.

- Back up your battle.

Often a lack of knowledge is what hinders communication between parents and policymakers. By informing your local school decision makers of valid reasoning behind your argument/requests, your words become more powerful and potentially effective. This includes attending PTA meetings, local school board meetings, etc. and voicing your concerns.

- Advocate with the experts.

While parental support is important, aiding your argument with expert testimony from professors specialized in childhood education and child psychology can help you attain the clout you need to get taken seriously.

- Always have a "plan B".

While all your efforts may be completely forthright and justified to elicit a favorable response, sometimes you just cannot beat the political system behind many schools. Do not take the rejection personally; rather, consider alternative remedies you can implement to help support the health of your child regardless.

Getting & Staying Healthy - Naturally!

The human body is a highly complex mechanism. Body or physical health refers to the overall condition of that system. We say that optimal physical health is achieved when the body is free from disease, abnormality and injury, and is able to function well.

However, often the body does not function well when it is attacked by environmental elements, genetic malfunction, injury, and biological intrusions. These factors can result in a multitude of ailments that affect the thyroid and adrenal glands, as well as the liver and pancreas. They can cause damage to the respiratory system (bronchitis, asthma, etc), hinder digestive processes, and even cause cancer.

Whether you're a parent or child, man or woman, young or old, staying healthy is very important. Maintaining an individual's overall wellbeing can involve treating everything from colds and flu, to cuts and scrapes, and sometimes even embarrassing conditions like bad breath, hemorrhoids, or body odor.

Keeping the right tools on hand (both treatments and information) will prevent frustration and help in the time of crisis; even if the crisis is just a bruised knee from a bicycle fall, a sore elbow from too much tennis, the sniffles, or a quick immunity boost in hopes of avoiding the seasonal cold.

At Native Remedies you will find a comprehensive set of herbal remedies to help you manage and optimize your physical health – naturally and safely.

Two Important Differences in Native Remedies Products

We use the Full Spectrum Method of extraction to create our products. Many so-called natural remedies are manufactured using standardized extractions which – although often cited as being more scientific method – is not approved by the manufacturers of holistic medicines.

To us, it makes little sense for companies to go the natural route, while being unable to guarantee that their product is free of contamination with chemicals known to be harmful to health! Using the Full Spectrum Method helps us to maintain the integrity, balance and therapeutic effect of herbs with the least risk of side effects or harm to your health!

Read more about the our Manufacturing & Full Spectrum Approach »

We utilize a unique dual-modality approach to complete holistic wellness because we know that natural medicine works best in combination (herbal, homeopathic, flower essences and tissue salts) for fast relief and long-term care. Our approach provides a complete solution by offering OTC homeopathic remedies for relief of symptoms as well as compound herbal remedies for complete support of your physical, emotional and mental well-being.

While each of our natural remedies works well on its own to address a specific body function or relieve a particular symptom, we believe that by combining our herbal and homeopathic remedies you will find a complete solution that is safe and highly effective.

The importance of Omega-3 fatty acids

Scientists have established the effectiveness of Omega 3 in a number of health areas, including your Heart, Brain, Joints, Skin, Immune system, Vision, and Digestion. Like any product on the market today there are 'good fish oils' and there are 'bad fish oil'!

With a bad one you may be unwittingly introducing substances into your body that you DO NOT want... such as Mercury and PCB's for example. We impose tougher standards on the purity of our fish oil than any other known manufacturer. DHA is the most important fatty acid in the human brain.

High in DHA and proven to be pure and free of contaminants the Xtend-Life brand is considered to be the 'Rolls Royce' of concentrated Omega 3 fish oils at an affordable cost and has been enjoyed by thousands of customers in more than 40 countries for the last eight years.

Don't forget a good multi-vitamin!

Xtend-Life Multi-Xtra is a natural multi vitamin/supplement using only the finest natural vitamins available on the market today. Some manufacturers call the vitamins they use in their products 'whole food' vitamins, but that is somewhat misleading.

They are natural but they are grown using bio-technology and are not extracted directly from plants. What is important is that we do NOT use vitamins which are derived from petrochemicals. Multi-Xtra contains 48 bio-available ingredients.

Unlike a 'normal' multi it contains much more than just a basic vitamin/mineral mix. Multi-Xtra is probably the best multi vitamin/mineral supplement in the world and undoubtedly provides the best value for money available anywhere.
